Section 1: Client Onboarding System

NaN%
through guide

The onboarding experience sets the container for the entire coaching engagement. Clients who are well-onboarded trust the process faster, go deeper sooner, and get better results. These prompts help you create a thorough, professional onboarding experience efficiently — including the discovery session, assessment debriefs, goal-setting, and development plan — so you can focus on the relationship rather than the paperwork.

through guide

Most coaches spend 30-45 minutes preparing for each session — reviewing notes, identifying themes, planning the opening, thinking through possible directions. Al compresses this to 10 minutes without reducing quality. When your preparation is faster, you can take on more clients, prepare more thoroughly, or simply have more energy for the sessions themselves. This section gives you the full session preparation toolkit.

through guide

As an executive coach, you are not just facilitating conversations — you are providing developmental experiences and frameworks that help clients grow as leaders. These prompts give you the tools to bring richer models, exercises, and frameworks to your clients without spending hours creating them from scratch.

Section 5: Program Design and Marketing

Great coaches are often poor marketers — not because the work is not valuable, but because translating transformative work into compelling packages and content requires a different skill set. These prompts close that gap. This section covers package design, proposal writing, thought leadership content, and case study creation — everything you need to build a full practice without becoming a marketer.
